HOW DOES YOUR GARDEN GROW? . . . Mrs. John Lampo, 24439 Hawthorne Ave., Welteria has one with an unusual gladioli bed. In the center of the patch is a unique blossom which has six smaller flowers budding in the center. That plant, and others in the garden, have as many as three branch stalks, instead of the single stalk common to most gladioli. How did it happen? "I don't know," Mrs. Lampo said. "I planted them last year, and they were just like any other gladioli. Now the nursery man from whom I bought the bulbs says I have something different. But he's just as much in the dark as I am about why the plants should flower this way. Does anybody know the answer?"
